

Educational History

- 1992 Ph.D. in Psychology, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign
 Major: Cognitive and Experimental Psychology; Minors: Biological Psychology, Philosophy; Dissertation: The Error-Related Negativity: Evidence for a Neural Mechanism for Error-Related Processing; Advisors: Michael G. H. Coles and Emanuel Donchin
- 1985 A.B. in Psychology, summa cum laude, Phi Beta Kappa.
 Augustana College, Rock Island, IL; Advisor: Tyler S. Lorig

Professional Experience

- 2010–present Professor, Department of Psychology, University of Michigan
2004–present Arthur F. Thurnau Professor, University of Michigan
2015–2016 Visiting Scholar, Graduate School of Education and Information Studies, UCLA
2003–2012 Associate Research Professor, Center for Human Growth and Development,
 University of Michigan
2002–2010 Associate Professor, Department of Psychology, University of Michigan
 (Cognition and Perception Area Chair, 2006–2008)
1995–2002 Assistant Professor, Department of Psychology, University of Michigan
1992–1994 Postdoctoral Fellow, Center for Neuroscience, University of California, Davis

Honors

- 2019, 2020 University Housing Honored Instructor, University of Michigan
2011 Fellow, Association for Psychological Science
2010 John Dewey Teaching Award, University of Michigan, College of LS&A
2009 University of Michigan Greek Community Outstanding Teaching Award 2004 Arthur F. Thurnau Professorship, “the University’s highest award for excellence in undergraduate education”
1999 University of Michigan, College of Literature, Science, and the Arts, Excellence in Education Award
1994 National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke Postdoctoral Fellowship
 (Individual Award)
1992–1993 McDonnell-Pew Postdoctoral Fellowship, UC Davis, Center for Neuroscience
1986–1989 National Science Foundation Graduate Fellowship, UIUC
1985–1986 Dallenbach Fellowship, UIUC
1985 Ralph Waldo Hansen Award for Excellence in Psychology
1985 John Lang Writing Excellence Award

Academic Interests

My academic interests span two lines of teaching and research: My longest-running line of research is in cognitive neuroscience: to understand brain processes involved in error detection, how those processes are involved in anxiety disorders, and how they manifest the executive functions that promote academic achievement in children. More recently, I have focused on higher education: I teach first-year undergraduate students evidence-based principles for learning and finding purpose in college. My research in this area uses institutional data to understand factors within the institution and the curriculum that promote or hinder academic success.

Error Detection in the Brain. A central focus of my research for 30 years has been cognitive neuroscience, specifically how the human brain monitors itself and the outside world to detect performance errors. My primary methodological tool during that time has been event-related potentials, which are measures of brain electrical activity recorded from scalp electrodes. I was one of the researchers who originally discovered the error-related negativity (ERN), an event-related potential that occurs when people make errors. That original report has been cited over 3200 times and is the third highest cited article ever in the journal Psychological Science. My laboratory made the initial discovery that individuals with OCD show exaggerated ERN activity compared to healthy controls, which has spawned a large research literature on anxiety and the ERN. Since then, I have collaborated with colleagues in Psychiatry on a major research program using the ERN to understand the development of pediatric psychopathology, including OCD, ADHD, and autism. In a second major line of my research, I have collaborated with developmental psychologists to understand how elementary school affects brain activity and executive function in children transitioning from pre-school to kindergarten.

Undergraduate Academic Success. In 2013, I created a new first-year (freshman) seminar called “Cognitive Science of Academic Success,” in which I teach the fundamental cognitive principles for effective learning, as well as broader evidence-based principles for finding purpose in college. I have taught classes in Michigan’s Comprehensive Studies Program (CSP) Summer Bridge Program. I have made numerous presentations on the cognitive science of learning for professionals, high school students, and college students at the University of Michigan and elsewhere (see list below). My interest in academic success extends to improving instruction: for three years I co-taught my department’s graduate student instructor training course. My expertise in instructional practices led to my serving as chair of the university committee to name a new director of Michigan’s Center for Research on Learning and Teaching.

Higher Education Research. My newest line of research uses institutional administrative data to understand the factors that contribute to undergraduate academic success, especially for students from less-privileged academic backgrounds. I am interested in quasi-experimental quantitative methods focused on rigorous causal inference. My paper with economist Julian Hsu (now an economist at Amazon) will be my first publication coming from this effort. Using regression discontinuity, Julian and I show that mathematics course-placement recommendations at the University of Michigan influence students to take calculus or pre-calculus, as intended by the policy. However, the recommendations appear to nudge some students away from STEM majors and courses that require calculus. The paper is in revision at Education Finance and Policy. We have presented these data at the Society for Research on Educational Effectiveness and the Association for Educational Finance and Policy. This research has required me to become deeply familiar with Michigan’s data warehouse and to acquire skills in cleaning and merging institutional higher education data.

Courses Taught

Introduction to Cognitive Psychology (enrollment 350-450) (1995-present)
First-Year (Freshman) Seminar: Cognitive Science of Academic Success (enrl. 18; 2013-present)
Psychology Dept. Graduate Student Teaching Academy (instructor training) (2016-2018)
Comprehensive Studies Program/Summer Bridge Program: CSP 100 (2014)
Mind, Brain, and Spirituality (enrollment 300) (2013)
Cutting-Edge Cognition (upper-level undergraduate seminar) (2012)

Freshman Seminar: Mind, Brain, and Evil (a.k.a. Mind, Brain, and Violence)
Freshman Seminar: Consciousness
Group Section for Laboratories in Biopsychology
Methods in Cognitive Neuroscience
Graduate Seminar on Event-Related Brain Potentials
Cognition and Perception Graduate Preliminary Exam Preparation Seminar

Invited Talks on Undergraduate Academic Success

UM Bentley Historical Library Faculty Seminar (2019)
UM Ross School of Business Preparation Initiative Boot Camp (2012-2014, 2016-2018)
Chemistry 209, Structure and Reactivity Co-Requisite Seminar (2018)
Shiawassee Scholars Program (2015, 2017)
UCLA Graduate School of Education and Information Sciences (2018)
